Rally cry: Demonstrators gather at The Whittington last Thursday to hear that their sustained efforts to stop slash plans may prove victorious

Health minister's U-turn as he promises halt on 'inconceivable' cuts to Whittington services

By Lucy Purdy

A "COMPLETE halt" has been ordered on deeply unpopular plans to close The Whittington Hospital's accident and emergency department after health minister Andy Burnham dramatically intervened.

In what is being seen as a testament to people power and the huge campaign against the cuts, the health secretary contacted local newspapers to announce his decision last Thursday, saying it was "inconceivable that Labour would support the closing of the Whittington A&E or its maternity services".

Conservative shadow health secretary Andrew Lansley and Liberal Democrat leader Nick Clegg have already said they would protect the hospital as it is, leading campaigners to cautiously celebrate securing the hospital's short-term future.

A rally outside the 160-year-old hospital in Highgate Hill last Thursday turned from a fierce protest into a tentative celebration as news of the unexpected pledge filtered through. Mr Burhnam has been accused by the shadow health secretary as having "caved in" on the issue after he previously accused Tory counterparts of "resisting change" when they called for the controversial plans to be stopped.

But Mr Burnham said he had not seen enough evidence to warrant the closure, and that he planned to ask the NHS North Central London Sector Review panel to "go back to the drawing board". He added: "I'll order a complete halt in the process that is being run. As far as I've seen there is no clinical evidence or clinical support for any kind of downgrading or closure. On that basis it's simply inconceivable that Labour would support the closing or downgrading of The Whittington A&E or its maternity services."

'I'm ecstatic we've succeeded in bureaucrats to back down. NHS clean on what remaining plans

Reaction: Lynne Featherstone

Every consultant from the hospital has already come out against the plans, saying in a signed letter that they have "great concerns" about any changes being made to the 24/7 blue-light services. And more than 5,000 concerned residents lined Holloway Road during a march in February, brandishing banners and angrily chanting for NHS chiefs to leave the hospital alone.

But it is not yet clear exactly what Mr Burnham's pledge will mean. Critics have pointed out the timing of his U-turn on the plans, made with just seven days to go until the general election. Others have warned Mr Burnham's hands may still be tied by budget constraints in the future. Health chiefs across Haringey, Enfield, Barnet, Islington and Camden have been told to find £500million of savings in the next six years and the cost-cutting review across the five boroughs is just one of hundreds being considered up and down the country.

NHS bosses may also be able to veto his pledge on the grounds that it is undemocratic – the review has yet to reach a public consultation stage. And critics have also pointed out that NHS London has always been determined to leave the North Central sector, stretching from Hertfordshire to Euston, with just two major acute hospitals.

The proposals, penned by sector chief executive Rachel Tyndall and leaked to the media last year, set out options for a cost-cutting reshuffle of hospitals and services. The Whittington A&E could be scaled back to a 16-hour or cut completely and under one of the proposals, North Middlesex University Hospital in Edmonton – the next nearest A&E for many Haringey residents – could also be downgraded to a local hospital without a 24-hour A&E. The Whittington's 50-bed maternity unit is also at risk under all seven options and maternity services at the North Mid – the destination of choice for many of Haringey's mums-to-be – could also fall under the axe.

Surprise: Andrew Lansley

Shirley Franklin, who has helped collect more than 16,000 signatures and heads the Save The Whittington Hospital Coalition, warned decision-makers that they were not going to go away.

She said: "We'll be here to keep an eye on them and make sure they stick to their promises. Hopefully this is not an electoral gimmick."

But Hornsey and Wood Green Lib Dem candidate Lynne Featherstone welcomed the decision. She told the Advertiser: "I am ecstatic that we have been successful in forcing faceless health bureaucrats to back down. The plans to change health services in north London are ongoing – NHS London needs to come clean on what the remaining plans will mean for people in Haringey."

A spokesman from North Central London NHS said: "Any options for changes to services at The Whittington would have to have clinical backing and there would be a full public consultation before any changes were made."

A triumph of passion over penny-pinching means campaigners got their voices heard

By Lucy Purdy

THE battle to save The Whittington has snowballed into an all-singing, all-dancing, well-oiled campaign since the proposals first came to light in November.

Seasoned campaigners have used their know-how and enthusiasm to help draw in thousands of residents from across the area and mobilise them into standing up for their cherished hospital.

Young hope: Clementine Cope, three, joins the demonstrators

With little more than passion and the belief in their cause, they managed to gather some 5,000 people together on a rainy Saturday in February to march along Holloway Road – undoubtedly one of the turning points in the campaign.

Residents, doctors, patients, politicians, trade unions, residents' associations and community groups joined together in a heartfelt and colourful display of feeling to shout, persuade and plead their way toward getting their point across.

Few sitting alongside me in the first Save The Whittington Hospital Coalition meeting in a dusty community hall in Archway earlier this year would have expected the campaign to become such a political heavyweight and to have coaxed the recent astonishing pledges from all three main parties.

Vocal: Frank Dobson speaks out against the proposals to strip the cherished hospital

It is a testament to the hard work and inspirational zeal displayed by the likes of joint chairwomen Shirley Franklin and Zozi Goodman that people such as Andy Burnham and Nick Clegg were forced to sit up and take notice, even if it was purely with votes in mind.

And the NHS bureaucrats behind the plans were delivered another blow when 100 Whittington consultants braved the wrath of their superiors by speaking out against the plans, because NHS London has consistently maintained that the review is "clinically led".

It remains to be seen whether we have seen the last of the threat to The Whittington and can now focus on the axe hovering over the likes of the North Mid and the Royal Free.

But NHS London bosses can be sure that if The Whittington is placed at risk again next year or in ten, the juggernaut of feeling against them will never be far away.

Damning report into hospital plans – but bosses refuse to publish or confirm them

Silent: Stephen Conroy, NHS NCL programme director

By Lucy Purdy

NHS bosses have refused to make public a controversial report which is thought to be the driving force behind the current review.

The so-called McKinsey report, commissioned by NHS London from management consultants McKinsey last year, has still not been made publicly available despite several requests from campaigners, politicians and newspapers. The report's findings are thought to be being used by NHS London as evidence of their case for change and "modelling" of future services.

The decision not to release the document has sparked fury from campaigners and accusations that the review is being shrouded in secrecy and carried out entirely behind closed doors, with any chance of proper discussion being stifled.

A British Medical Association report entitled London's NHS On The Brink said of the McKinsey report: "Indeed despite the predictably heavy McKinsey focus on slashing hospitals and NHS secondary care providers, there is little evidence from board papers that the full report has been seen, let alone discussed by the very NHS Trusts or foundation trusts which are likely to be first in the firing line."

"NHS London has refused to publish the full McKinsey report on which they have based their guidance to primary care trusts. This ensures that Londoners, and other analysts have no opportunity to scrutinise McKinsey's methods, evidence or findings – all of which must be open to question."

A spokeswoman from NHS London said: "We must make sure our plan to improve the quality of care for patients is affordable. NHS London plans to publish the report in the coming months."

She added that the reason the report has not yet been released is that "there is still work to be done on it".

Guerilla gardener is planting springtime flowers in borough's potholed streets

By Lucy Purdy

A GUERILLA gardener has hit the streets of Haringey, transforming unsightly and dangerous potholes into floral havens of the springtime.

Steve Wheen decided to fill in the dodgy dips with colourful cyclamen, narcissus and polyanthus and set up a blog www.thepothole gardener.com to chart his efforts. It attracted 25,000 hits in its first month and 33-year-old Steve has been propelled into the limelight as an unlikely urban hero.

Potholes in North View Road, near Alexandra Palace, and Nightingale Road in Wood Green have already been given a flowery transformation by Steve, who is a keen cyclist and gardener.

He told the Advertiser: "I got the idea to fill up the holes with flowers after I needed to come up with a spring project for my course at Central St Martins college. As a cyclist it's not that fun to go over a pothole, especially after all the snow we've had this winter. The damage all around London is incredible.

"The response on the street has been varied. People always smile and have a look and a laugh which is really nice. And the blog has gone into meltdown it's getting so many hits."

Internet fans have been suggesting roads across London for Steve to turn into miniature gardens, including one proposal that he transform Edgware Road into Kew Gardens.

Steve, who lives in Whitechapel, picks early mornings and evenings to carry out his undercover work to avoid being run over but said his work often gets squashed almost immediately.

Visit www.thepotholegardener.com to find out more.

Haringey Council recently announced it would double its pothole budget to tackle the aftermath of the winter's harsh weather.

Get your skates on to enjoy Ally Pally rink before refub

SKATERS can take a last turn on Ally Pally's ice-rink before its doors are closed and it is replaced by a new, international-sized rink in the autumn.

Ice enthusiasts can take a turn on the old rink for free between 11am-2pm today before it undergoes a £2million refurbishment. Long past its prime, the rink will be replaced by a new one measuring 56m by 26m as well as a more environmentally friendly chiller system, 250 more seats and updated toilets and changing rooms. The work is expected to take about six months.

Alexandra Palace officials are now seeking planning permission for a temporary ice rink in the ground as a "fun alternative" during the summer months.

It would be provided by former Dancing On Ice winner Kyran Bracken, who regularly trains at the palace's ice rink and whose company has organised similar rinks around the country.

"The temporary rink would be housed in a marquee on the little-used Pavilion car park and could be operational as soon as late May or early June if permission is given," explained palace managing director Rebecca Kane. "It would mean we wouldn't have to disappoint our regular skaters while this essential work to replace the permanent rink goes ahead."

The Palace's current rink offers figure skating, ice hockey and toddle training sessions as well as its Christmas pantomime on ice.

Police seize mephdrone supplies in raids on three properties after a tip-off

POLICE have mounted a series of raids to stamp out the illegal trade in the recently banned drug mephedrone amid fears it is being peddled to teenagers in Haringey and Barnet.

Just a week after the infamous stimulant nicknamed "meow meow" was officially outlawed, officers have revealed that they have seized 10kg of the drug, worth tens of thousands of pounds. Four raids took place at addresses across Muswell Hill and Finchley on April 21 and 22, after police received a tip-off about one teenager displaying symptoms of mephedrone abuse and wearing a wristband advertising the website suspected of supplying the drug.

The former legal high was frequently sold under the guise of plant food but was officially classified a class-B drug after it was reportedly linked to 25 deaths.

Side effects of the drug, which has been likened to ecstasy, include swollen limbs, heart palpitations, nose bleeds, paranoia and chest pains.

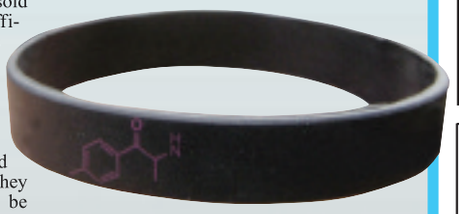

Police obtained three warrants to raid homes in the Muswell Hill area, where they recovered 9kg of what is believed to be mephedrone as well scales, small plastic bags and £50,000 in cash.

The houses were in The Avenue, George Crescent and Dukes Avenue.

They had already seized 1kg of the drug along with computers and bank statements from a house in Dollis Park, Finchley.

The hauls are thought to be worth tens of thousands of pounds after the reclassification of the drug drove prices to a high of £20 a gram.

Four men, two aged 17, one aged 18 and another aged 21, were arrested in connection with the raids and later released on bail pending further enquiries.

Sergeant Alison Preece said: "Obviously we're still waiting for tests to confirm the exact nature of the substance we found, but the indication is that it is mephedrone. This substance has only recently become illegal so there are people stockpiling quantities of it from when it was still legal and are now trying to reap the rewards of selling it now that it's no longer freely available.

"I'm glad that we have been able to remove such a large quantity of an inherently dangerous and illegal substance and hopefully prevent a few people from potentially coming to harm.

"The call from our informant in this case was vital and any help from vigilant members of the public is always appreciated."

Keeping world of ballet on its toes

BALLET BLACK just keeps on going from strength to strength.

The acclaimed ballet company, starring dancers of black and Asian descent, has come a long way since just six dancers became its first members nearly ten years ago.

Now it attracts dancers, choreographers and designers from across the world and has enjoyed an impressive nine sell-out seasons.

The cutting-edge dance troupe was started in 2001 by Cassa Pancho as a way of providing opportunities in classical ballet for those not normally associated with the art form – men and women from the black and Asian communities.

In a very short amount of time Pancho had opened the Ballet Black School for youngsters in Shepherd's Bush and the Ballet Black Associate Programme for teenage and professional dancers while the troupe had begun performing in some of the country's leading dance venues.

Now it's generally regarded as one of the essential parts of the classical ballet landscapes, an accolade consolidated by its latest show – Four Short Works – to be performed at the Bernie Grant Arts Centre this Friday and Saturday.

It's the first time Ballet Black has performed at the Tottenham centre and it's assembled something rather special in the form of original ballets by some of the stars in the dance world firmament namely: Richard Alston, Christopher Marney, Robert Hylton and Will Tuckett.

● Four Short Works takes place at the centre in Town Hall Approach in Tottenham Green at 7.30pm. Tickets cost £12.50 (£8 concessions). For details and reservations call the box office on 020 8365 5450.

HUD SCREAMER BOOSTS SPURS

Nervy win sets up a crunch top-four showdown at City

By James Lowe

A MISSILE launched from 25 yards by the right boot of Tom Huddlestone was enough to guide Spurs to a 1-0 victory over Bolton at White Hart Lane on Saturday.

The 23-year-old midfielder is known for his keenness for having a crack at goal, often from distance, but finding the back of the net has been rare. In fact, statistics before the match gave him the dubious honour of topping the Premier League this season for the most shots taken per goals scored (69 up until Saturday, with only one league goal to show for it.)

However, his strike into the top right-hand corner on 38 minutes could not have come at a more crucial time as Spurs played out a nervy last home game of the season at the Lane.

> "Spurs weren't exactly in the top four when I came here. We've done very well."

Gareth Bale roused the fans' excitement levels with another energetic game, picking up a well-deserved Young Player Of The Season award to a fans' ovation after the match in a season which has driven his standing at the club to dizzy new heights.

But few clear-cut chances were created at either end with Bolton being kept at bay by the staunch defending of Michael Dawson, who was the fans' overall favourite as he won the Player Of The Season award. Confident performances by fellow centre-back Ledley King and goalkeeper Heurelho Gomes ensured the team finished with a clean sheet, although the Brazilian keeper picked up a groin strain in the dying minutes which may keep him out of tonight's fourth-spot battle with Manchester City.

Younes Kaboul's contribution down the right flank should not be forgotten as he frequently raced ahead of David Bentley to create a number of openings as Spurs mixed up the attack in an attempt to put balls through to the front two, in addition to making a goal-line clearance from Matt Taylor in the closing minutes of the game.

With Manchester City securing all three points at the weekend as well, the tension has been cranked up to breaking point ahead of tonight's head-to-head clash for fourth spot with City at Eastlands.

However, manager Harry Redknapp was keen to play down the expectation to finish in the Champions League places, despite acknowledging the midweek clash was being billed as their cup final for the season.

He said: "Under pressure? No, not at all. Spurs weren't exactly in the top four when I came here. We've done very well. I like the football we play. I enjoy watching them train every day. I love every minute of being with them. The future's good for Tottenham."

Tottenham's match-winner: Tom Huddlestone's thunderbolt was enough to see off Bolton Wanderers on Saturday

Borough finish with a crushing defeat

Haringey Borough 0 Hanwell Town 7

Molten Spartan Premier Division

HARINGEY BOROUGH claimed their highest league finish in eight years despite ending their season with an embarrassingly heavy defeat at home to Hanwell Town on Saturday.

Having been embroiled in a relegation battle for much of the campaign, Borough enjoyed a dramatic upturn in their fortunes in the final two months to end up in 15th place – eight points clear of the bottom two.

However, Tom Loizou's men were unable to carry that improved form into Saturday's match as they were comprehensively outclassed by a Hanwell side who took the lead through Gulan Adan after just three minutes.

Only a stunning save from Hanwell keeper Rhys Marshall prevented Bosun Adebaki from grabbing an equaliser, but the visitors continued to slice through Borough's defence with alarming ease and it came as little surprise when Blaise O'Brien added a second.

The hosts then squandered a golden opportunity to get back in the match when Mario Georgiou's penalty was superbly saved by Marshall soon after, and further goals from O'Brien and Wayne Jackson gave Hanwell a commanding lead at the interval.

O'Brien added to Borough's misery by completing his hat-trick early in the second half, and the same player was later to notch his fourth as he rounded off the scoring after Charley Baverstock had grabbed the sixth.

Young athletes win season opener

TALENTED youngsters from Enfield and Haringey Athletic Club defied dreadful conditions at the Lee Valley Athletics Stadium on Sunday to record a resounding victory in their opening Southern Premier Division meeting of the United Kingdom Young Athletes League.

The host club enjoyed a string of victories in all three age groups to end up more than 200 points clear of closest rivals Havering Mayesbrook.

Clinton Fubara shone at under-13 level, winning the 100metres, 200m and shot before teaming up with Sean Bazanye Lutu, Oliver O'Sahon-Lubel and Josh Aidoo to claim his fourth victory of the day in the 4x100m relay.

Enfield and Haringey's dominance in the sprints was even more pronounced among the girls, as Tyla Beckles and Desiree Henry enjoyed double victories at under-13 and under-17 level respectively. And the under-15s made it a clean sweep of the sprints for the girls as Kenisha Allen took the 100m and Ama Pipi came first in the 200m.

George Vaughan was another to impress in the under-13 age group as he won both the 75m hurdles and the high jump, while Dominic Palmer-Leandre shone in the field for the under-15s – taking top spot in the discus, hammer and shot.

But it was the under-17 girls who were the stand-out performers as they won all but two of their 16 events, with Elizabeth Grimsey enjoying double success in the high jump and pole vault.
